Fiction is the name we use for stories that are make-believe, such as Harry Potter or Alice in Wonderland. It can be so close to the truth that it seems as real as something that happened to you this morning. Or, fiction can be as fantastic as the most unbelievable fairy tale.

Not everything in a fictional story has to be made up. You, of course, are real, and the moon is real, and many of the things that you could describe, such as the stars, the wind, and the pull of gravity, would be real. It would be a trip you took in your imagination.

Nonfiction, on the other hand, is all about true things. Someone’s biography is nonfiction; so is your autobiography. So are articles in your local newspaper, and school reports on science. Imagine writing history about the 1989 San Francisco earthquake, or a report about a high school sports team. An old proverb says, “Truth is stranger than fiction.” Do you think that’s true?
(A) Nothing is made up.
(B) History is nonfiction, too.
(C) But your trip through space would be fiction.
(D) You could write a story in which you fly to the moon.
(E) But fiction isn’t always different from the way things usually are.

For two thousand years, Confucius was canonized as China’s First and Supreme Teacher. This is a cruel irony. Of course, Confucius devoted much attention to education but he never considered teaching as his first and real calling. His true vocation was politics. He had a mystical faith in his political mission. (88.商.54-56)
54. According to the passage, what might Confucius be most interested in?
(A) Politics.  (B) Teaching.
(C) Faith.      (D) Vocation.
55. The word “calling” in the third sentence is synonymous with ______
(A) attention.    (B) vocation.
(C) education.  (D) mission.
56. What does the cruel irony in the passage refer to?

(A) Confucius devoted himself to education; therefore, he was canonized as China’s First and Supreme Teacher.

(B) Although Confucius was concerned about education, he didn’t devote much attention to it.

(C) Teaching was not considered a good job, so Confucius chose politics as his real occupation.

(D) Confucius has been recognized as a great teacher in spite of his full devotion to politics.
Every month we receive several boxes of books from our main office in Hong Kong. At the same time, they send us a list describing what they have sent us. We examine the contents of the boxes to see whether we have received all the books on the list. If everything is correct, we simply sign the list and return it to Hong Kong. If there is any difference between the description on the list and the books actually received, we write a letter explaining the difference and ask for confirmation of the list. (87.41-45)
41. Books are received ______
   (A) daily     (B) weekly   (C) monthly (D) yearly.
42. One thing we have to do with the books when we receive them is ______

   (C) sign them (D) examine them.
43. The list is probably made ______
   (A) in the main office (B) in the letter
   (C) in the boxes       (D) in the books.
44. The contents of the boxes are probably ______
(A) books       (B) the main office
(C) letters and lists (D) a bookstore.

45. If no list were received, we would probably ______
(A) send the books back       (B) write to Hong Kong
(C) praise the main office    (D) forget the whole thing.
Dear Tom,

It seems only yesterday that Jack and I were helping you learn your ABC's--and now you have finished high school and been accepted at Taipei University.

We are both very proud of you, Tom. We have followed your high-school career with joy and pleasure and know that your four years at college will be even more rewarding. A word of congratulation just doesn't seem enough, so I am sending you a gift that I'm sure you will find useful--an unabridged dictionary. Jack says you'll not only find it handy in your studies, but a great argument-saver when playing Scrabble with your friends. Mom and Dad are coming here for a weekend next month. Please try to take a few days off and come to join us. We are looking forward to seeing you.

Love,

Sally
41. Which of the following is NOT mentioned as a reason for writing the letter?
(A) To congratulate Tom on his wonderful achievement.
(B) To tell Tom of his parents' planned visit.
